

LONG ISLAND

Newsday wants you to pick our worst editorial.

Real Estate CLASSIFIEDS

Cutchogue building needs vision to transform it into a home

Updated January 21, 2015 3:49 PM

By LISA CHAMOFF Special to Newsday

A property for sale in Cutchogue needs an imaginative cash buyer to turn it into a special residence. On the market for $425,000, the structure was once a potato packing plant, and the current owner is using it as a woodworking shop. It's in a residential zone, so it can be used as a home.

“It really lends itself to a creative type . . . You can have a really spectacular home,” says Nicholas Planamento of Town & Country Real Estate, who is co-listing the property with Joan Bischoff van Heemskerck.

advertisement | advertise on newsday

The approximately 1,500-square-foot, wood-shingled structure consists of one large room and a large, narrow room off back.

Planamento says there's the opportunity for expansion.

This property for sale in Cutchogue needs an imaginative cash buyer to turn it into a unique residence.