An East Hampton home on the market for $1.749 million was once owned by political correspondent Sherrye Henry, who appeared with presidential hopeful Hillary Clinton in the 2005 documentary "Running in High Heels."

The home, built in 1987, has a master suite with a fireplace, two guest bedrooms and a separate tree-house-like guest loft with a walk-in steam shower, a dressing room and a lounge. There is custom wainscoting and woodwork throughout the living room and dining area.

"It has a lot of unpainted wood," says listing agent William Stoecker, of Town & Country Real Estate. "It almost feels like a mountain retreat rather than something you'd find in the Hamptons."

The 8-acre property, which is next to a 300-acre wildlife preserve, has a heated gunite pool and tennis court.
